

11. Bertania, A., et al., Total hip arthroplasty in severe segmental femoral bone loss situations: Use of a reconstruction modular stem design (JVC IXTM). Orthopaedics & Traumatology: Surgery & Research, 2009. 95: p. 491-497.
12. Deshmukh, T.R., et al., A novel rapid prototyping and finite element method-based development of the patient-specific temporomandibular joint implant. Computer methods and programs in biomedicine, 2012. 15(5): p. 363-370.
13. Li, P., et al., Establishment of sequential software processing for a biomechanical model of mandibular reconstruction with custom-made plate. Computer methods and programs in biomedicine, 2013. 3: p. 642-649.
14. Rahmati, S., F. Abbaszadeh, and F. Farahmand, An improved methodology for design of custom-made hip prostheses to be fabricated using additive manufacturing technologies. Rapid Prototyping Journal, 2012. 18: p. 389-400.
15. Ramos, A., et al., Design process of a novel cemented hip femoral stem concept. Materials and Design, 2012. 33: p. 313-321.
16. Cronskar, M., M. Backstrom, and L.-E. Rannar, Production of customized hip stem prostheses a comparison between conventional machining and electron beam melting (EBM). Rapid Prototyping Journal, 2013. 19(5): p. 365-372.
17. Yosibash, Z., A. Katz, and C. Milgrom, Toward verified and validated FE simulations of a femur with a cemented hip prosthesis. Medical Engineering & Physics, 2013. 35: p. 978-987.
18. Fiorentino, A., et al., Hip prosthesis design. Market analysis, new perspectives and an innovative solution. Procedia CIRP, 2013. 5: p. 310-314.

Porto e FEUP, 21 de outubro de 2013

Com as mais respeitosas saudações académicas,

Fernando Jorge Lino Alves
Professor Associado do DEMec